

Excitement and adventure in the Palaeolithic

Atta

JOLIEN JANZING & LINDE FAAS

Some forty thousand years ago, two species of human lived in Europe at the same time: the Neanderthal and a newcomer, Homo sapiens sapiens. Eleven-year-old Atta and her clan are Mixes, the result of interbreeding between the two species. Atta is sick of continually having to pick berries along with the women and children, while the boys are allowed to go hunting with the men. So she takes matters into her own hands – and finds herself eye to eye with a savage mammoth. She loses her way, is injured and ends up with a tribe of Neanders, who receive her warmly. So warmly, in fact, that she's not sure whether they'll let her go again.

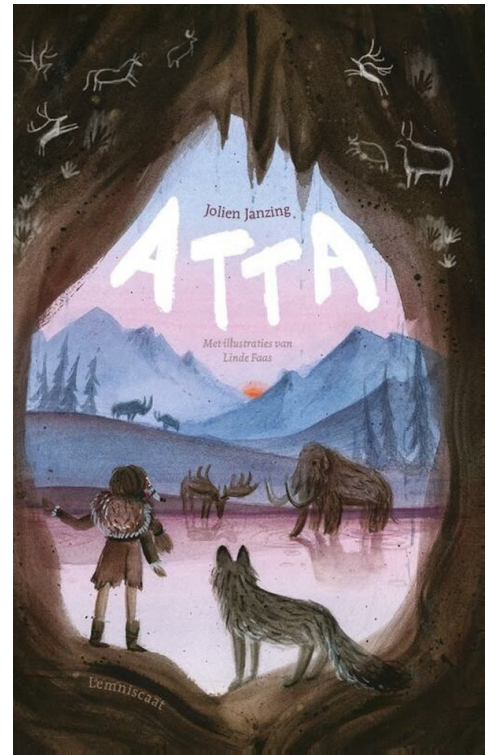

Pure and adventurous without any fuss; a breath of fresh air amid the hype of children's book country.

FRIESCH DAGBLAD

Atta is a cocky and headstrong girl that you'll immediately take to your heart. In this thrilling adventure she gains a better knowledge of both herself and her prejudices. Neander boy Noz is an exceptionally charming character as well, who with Atta's help goes through a wonderful evolution. Jolien Janzing brings to life a version of prehistoric times that makes a delightful setting. The atmospheric colour illustrations by Linde Faas make the achievement complete.

Linde Faas' illustrations perfectly suit Atta, who looks out into the world fearlessly and with an open mind.

FLANDERS TODAY ON 'AUDREY & ANNE'

AUTHORS

Jolien Janzing (b. 1964) is a seasoned author of historical stories both for adults and for children. She has a keen sense of how to shed light on the past and how to connect the local with the global from a little known and barely researched perspective. In doing so she often chooses exceptional women as her central characters. For each book she conducts thorough research but succeeds in doling out the historical information in such a way that her novels are invariably highly readable. Her writing style is filmic in nature. Linde Faas (b. 1985) is a Dutch illustrator, animator and artist. She creates her own picture books as well as illustrating writing by others. Faas lives and works in Norway, above the Arctic Circle, where the wild, untouched nature of the Arctic inspires her endlessly. Photo © Evert Mul

ORIGINAL TITLE Atta (2023, Lemniscaat, 142 pp.)

FORMAT 222 x 148

AGE 10+

TRANSLATION RIGHTS Robin van der

Gaag - foreignrights@lemniscaat.nl

TRANSLATION GRANTS Lien Devos - lien.d@flandersliterature.be