

A realistic and moving story about bullying

Red

JAN DE KINDER

It starts almost imperceptibly, with something innocuous. Tommy is shy, he blushes easily. A little girl notices it, points to him and winks at Paul, the biggest bully of all. Paul grins, people laugh and whisper, and Tommy turns redder and redder. 'Leave me alone,' he sighs, growing a bit quieter with every laugh. One snap of the fingers and Tommy's head turns as red as a lighthouse.

Thoughtful and beautifully illustrated

KIRKUS REVIEWS

Paul laughs harder and harder. The girl's sorry, it's not fun anymore and she wants Paul to stop immediately. What will she tell the teacher? Fearful of Paul, she remains quiet. But when the teacher asks if anyone saw anything, she raises her finger... together with everyone else in the classroom. The little girl learns why bullying isn't funny and tries to make it up to Tommy. 'Shall we play soccer together?'

Jan de Kinder offers us a powerful story about strong children on the playground who don't like bullying. The drawings underpin Tommy and the little girl's feelings at significant moments.

A useful opening into discussions about taking a stand when others do wrong

PUBLISHERS WEEKLY

AUTHOR

Jan De Kinder (b. 1964) has illustrated over forty books, including some of his own. In his drawings and stories he seeks to depict emotions and create powerful, atmospheric narratives, suffused with humour. His favourite colour is every shade of red. Photo © Steven Massart

ORIGINAL TITLE Rood of waarom pesten niet grappig is (2013, De Eenhoorn, 32 pp.)

FORMAT 265 x 205

AGE 4+

PRIZES USBBY Outstanding International Book

RIGHTS SOLD English (Eerdmans), French (Didier Jeunesse), German (Atlantis), Spanish (Pujol & Amadó), Catalan (Pujol & Amadó), Danish (Turbine), Slovenian (Sodobnost), Greek (Patakis), Portuguese (Brazil) (Iluminuras), Simplified Chinese (Petrel), Complex Chinese (Petrel), Korean (TheBookinMyLife), Hindi (A & A Books), Japanese (Mitsumura Educational)

TRANSLATION RIGHTS Sarah Claeys - sarah.claeys@eenhoorn.be

TRANSLATION GRANTS Elise Vanoosthuyse - elise@flandersliterature.be